Introducing His Fiancee.

There is doubt in some man's mind very often as to when he should make known to his people the girl he hopes to marry. In some cases he prefers that they should become acquainted before the die is cast and he has bound himself to her for better, for worse, by a promise. At other times he has a certain diffidence about introducing them to each other till they know in what position she is to stand toward himself, and the result is that he is a little bewildered. Perhaps in many ways it is more comfortable for a girl to know his people before she is presented to them as a future relative. But circumstances often render this out of the question, and then there is only one correct form of proceeding.

Where his people and hers live in the same place his family must call upon her as soon as they are informed of the engagement. If they live at a distance, they should at once write, welcoming her as a future relative, and it is usual where possible to invite her to stay with them and make their acquaintance. When this is done, it is a more comfortable plan on both sides if the fiancee can accompany her and introduce her in person to his people. It is a trying ordeal both to the girl and to her lover's family, this first introduction to each other, and if the lover himself is present—the connecting link of interest between the two—it makes it considerably more agreeable work for every one concerned.—Philadelphia Times.

The Money Making Game.

The first of all English games is making money. That is an all absorbing game, and we knock each other down often in playing at that than at football or any other rougher sport, and it is absolutely without purpose. No one who engages heartily in that game ever knows why. Ask a great money maker what he wants to do with his money—he never knows. He doesn't make it to do anything with it. He gets it only that he may get it. "What will you make of what you have got?" you ask. "Well, I'll get more," he says. Just as at cricket you get more runs. There's no use in the runs, but to get more of them than other people is the game. And there's no use in the money, but to have more of it than other people is the game. So all that great foul city of London there—rattling, growling, smoking, stinking—a ghastly heap of fermenting brickwork, pouring out poison at every pore—you fancy it is a city of work? Not a street of it! It is a great city of play; very nasty play, and very hard play, but still play. It is only Lord's cricket ground without the turf—a huge billiard table without the cloth, and with pockets as deep as the bottomless pit, but mainly a billiard table after all.—John Ruskin.

Cromwell.

Cromwell kept quiet during the years in which Charles was governing without a parliament. He is not heard of as resisting the payment of ship money or even as setting at defiance the ecclesiastical courts. Clearly he was no ambitious firebrand, but a man under authority, whose aim it was to carry obedience to the utmost limits consistent with his personal duty. This, too, is characteristic of the man and displays itself again and again in his prolonged hesitations to break with established authority.

In his conservative dislike to hasty changes, combined with religion influencing the conduct as well as the creed, Cromwell was a fair representative of the better part of England, none the less because when once his reluctance to step forward had vanished he was capable of administering heavy blows against those who blocked the way too persistently even for his patience and because when once he had broken with the past no going back was any longer possible for him.—"Cromwell's Place in History," by S. R. Gardiner.

She Knew Him.

Mrs. K. had engaged a robust, middle aged colored woman to do some housecleaning. During the progress of the work Mrs. K. said:

"A colored man came along here one day last week and wanted work, and I let him wash some windows, but he did not do the work at all well."

"What fo' lookin' man was he?" asked the helper.

"Well, he was a big, strong fellow, and he had but one eye. He said that his name was White. He did very poor work."

"I spees he did, lady. He's de wus' no 'count in dis town."

"Oh, then you know him?"

"Know 'im? Why, lady, I've mah'ied to 'im!"—Harper's Bazar.

African Expressions.

"Africans," writes a missionary, "have some very striking expressions, showing that they are full of poetical ideas. The Moongoes call thunder 'the sky's gun,' and the morning is with them 'the day's child.' The Zulus call the twilight 'the eyelashes of the sun.' An African who came to America was shown some ice, which he had not seen before, and he called it 'water fast asleep.'"

Cruel Retort.

"I have no patience with your democratic sentimentalism," said Miss Elderly with hauteur. "Blood tells, and my ancestors fought in the revolution, Miss Sprightly."

"I suppose you were too young to recall any incidents of the struggle?"—Detroit Free Press.

The Frankfurter Zeitung states that among 72 agents who make it a business to secure engagements for German actors no fewer than 15 were found to be men who had been punished for some crime or other.

The annual increase of the German nation during the last five years has been more than five times as much as that of the French.

The Roman mother who with her mantle defended the body of her child from the ravenous birds of prey is a perfect type of motherhood in all times and among all people. To protect her offspring from harm is the overwhelming instinct of motherhood. Modern mothers are coming to understand that the best protection they can give their children against the preying accidents of life is to transmit to them an abundance of natural health and hardihood. But a mother cannot confer health and strength to the special organs concerned in motherhood. Taken early during the expectant time, it makes the coming of baby entirely safe and nearly painless. It insures cheerfulness and recuperative energy to the mother and constitutional vigor to the child. It is the only perfect and positive specific for all weaknesses and diseases of the female organism.

Mrs. F. R. Forger, of Carus, Keyespha Co., Neb., writes: "I write to you again concerning my daughter, Mrs. D. Billings. She has taken two bottles of Favorite Prescription. She thinks the medicine did her a world of good. She was confined the 15th of February. Was out a short time and has a rosy, healthy daughter. Got along nicely afterward. Looks good, complexion looks clear, and she says she never felt so well."

Prospective mothers should know that Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is a scientific medicine, which gives perfect health and strength to the special organs concerned in motherhood. Taken early during the expectant time, it makes the coming of baby entirely safe and nearly painless. It insures cheerfulness and recuperative energy to the mother and constitutional vigor to the child. It is the only perfect and positive specific for all weaknesses and diseases of the female organism.

The Trans-Mississippi and International Congress is composed of delegates from every State and Territory West of the Mississippi river. The idea of this exposition originated in that Congress at its session at Omaha in 1896, and the project has become a National enterprise and the National Commission has been organized and is in active service, there being one commissioner for each of the several departments of the Government. Most of the Trans-Mississippi States are well along in the way of gathering exhibits from their respective States and many of them have made liberal appropriations, while others are preparing exhibits through private enterprise.

Vice-President H. B. Maxson of Reno, has made arrangements whereby he can get Nevada exhibits, shipped from any point in the State along the line of the O. P. R. R., to Omaha and return, and he requests all persons who wish the interests of the State advertised, to co-operate with the Exposition County Commissioner of his county, whose name is shown above, and prepare some product of his county and send it to the nearest point on the O. P. R. R. from which place it will be sent to Omaha and exhibited, and return to the same point at the close of the exposition, free of expense to the exhibitor. Full information should accompany everything sent for exhibition. Before sending anything to the line of the railroad a full description should be given to the Exposition Commissioner of the county, who in turn will notify the Vice-President, who will notify him what action to take, otherwise there might be many duplications. Apply to your County Representative for further information, and don't let this opportunity of advertising the resources of Nevada be lost.

IGNORING PARTY PLEDGES

The Republican National Convention which convened at St. Louis, June 1896, declared in favor of the independence of Cuba, the admission of the remaining Territories, and the passage of a free homestead measure by Congress. The President elected on that platform has been in office a little over twelve months, and a House of Representatives, a large majority of whose members endorsed the St. Louis platform, has been in session the greater part of that time.

Attention is now being directed to the fact that the Administration and the House of Representatives have ignored all of those pledges. The House has persistently refused to adopt a resolution admitting that a state of war exists in Cuba and recognizing the Cuban insurgents as belligerents. The adoption of such a resolution would give the Cuban patriots the right to purchase munitions of war in the United States and ship them from our ports at their own risk to Cuba. That right is accorded the Spaniards, who can purchase, without fear of interference by our Government, arms and ammunition at any factory in the United States and ship them to Cuba, but it is denied the Cubans, and our war vessels and revenue cutters have been used to intercept any and all vessels suspected of carrying supplies from the United States to the Cubans. That is the way the Administration assists the Cubans in gaining their independence though the platform on which Mr. McKinley was elected pledged the party to use its influence for that purpose.

Bills to admit the Territories of Arizona, New Mexico and Oklahoma to Statehood have been introduced in the House of Representatives. The committee to which those bills were referred quietly pigeon-holed them and there is not the slightest probability that any of them will be passed by the House so long as the Republican party remains in power and the citizens of the Territories vote for bimetalism. The fact that the platform declared for the admission of the Territories is utterly ignored because it carried into effect it would strengthen the silver men in the Senate.

The free homestead bill, which the Republican National platform pledged the party to pass, has fared no better than the Cuban belligerency resolution or the admission of the Territories, and it is expected that the monetary reform measure to which the President called the attention of Congress at the special session and with which the Committee on Banking and Currency of the House and Secretary Gage, have been wrestling for months, will not be introduced during the present session. The Administration feels that it would disrupt the party to attempt to retire greenbacks by exchanging interest-bearing bonds for them and giving the National banks complete control of the paper money of the country, and Mr. Reed will not permit these questions to be discussed at the present session of Congress.

A new House of Representatives will be chosen by the people next November and it is generally believed that it will not be Republican. If that belief is verified at the polls, President McKinley, before he leaves the White House, may be confronted with bills for the admission of the Territories, the free coinage of silver and the recognition of Cuba, if the patriots of that island do not in the meantime drive the hireling soldiery of Spain from its shores.

The United States Grand Jury has returned a true bill against wholesale and retail dealers who are known to be members of the coal combine. They are charged with the crime of being associated in restraint of interstate commerce, to regulate the price of coal in several States. The indictment covers twenty typewritten pages and charges the defendants in every form of expression in the law dictionary.

The Secretary of the Navy has authorized an absolute and positive denial of the report asserting that a partial report of the destruction of the Maine had been received by the Government from the Court of Inquiry, indicating that the loss of the vessel was due to an external explosion. Secretary Long declared that all the information received by his Department had been given to the public.

The Journal "poodle" as last night's Gazette pleases to term the writer of the squib referring to ex-Governor O'Connell's trip East may be accused of barking at the heels of this gubernatorial accident, but the Journal or its contributors cannot be accused of ever having shown the canine propensities of some people of licking the hands or boots of the ex-Governor simply to gain favor, or for reasons of policy.

The Loud postal bill, which proposed some radical changes in postal charges has been laid on the table in the House of Representatives by a vote of 125 to 101. This probably settles the fate of the bill for the present session. Loud of California has been working on the bill for some years but he failed to get it passed.

It is now claimed that the Naval Board of Inquiry will report that the Maine was blown up by an explosion from the outside. Spain, on the other hand, claims that it was one of the ship's magazines which blew up. This is just the same as the news of two weeks ago.

WE HAVE WAITED.

You bade me go, and I went away—
I went, though my heart was breaking
By never a sigh did my lips betray
The grief of that brief leave-taking

"Goodby," you said "Where'er you go
The prayers of your friends will follow.
But you said it in such a way, you know,
That it sounded strained and hollow.

I answered you in the same light tone,
Oh, the foolish words then spoken!
I regret them still, but my heart alone
I thought was tortured and broken.

But now I know that you also felt
The pang of that bitter parting,
When down at your feet I would have knelt
And the tears to my eyes were starting.

And I took your hand before them all
And smiled, though my heart was aching.
"Good luck," I said, "may your life befall, Goodby!" And my heart was breaking

And now I know it need not have been,
You loved me then as I loved you,
And a false pride parted our fond hearts
When both were loyal and both proved true

Think of the years that we have lost,
The years that might have been love
freighted,
The years that were lived at such a cost
To all our hopes—yet you have waited!

You have waited, and I have come
Forgive me, dear, that I caused you sorrow
I, too, have suffered. Come, make my home
Let the past be lost in a bright tomorrow

You have waited long, and I am here
Oh, let there be a glad tomorrow!
I know I love you, far or near
Oh, let us end this long, long sorrow!

—New York Ledger

Tricks With Liquid Air.

A small party of prominent electricians, among whom were Professor Elihu Thomson, John W. Gibboney and Walter C. Fish of Lynn, with Edwin W. Rice, Jr., and a few outsiders, sat down to a quiet supper in the private dining room of Earl & Martin's restaurant, on Union street, when some of the wits in the party amused themselves by playing tricks on the table attendants, and also on the astute cook, William J. Bond, by freezing some of the dishes solid as soon as the latter were put on the table.

In fact, to such an extent did one member of the party carry his merriment that he sent back a slice of bread, solidly congealed, to the cook, with an interrogation as to why such food was put upon the table. Billy was naturally puzzled at the occurrence, and all the more so when he, too, examined the bread complained of and found it crumbled to dust at his touch. He could not solve the enigma and was still further puzzled when a glass of liquid was returned, also frozen solid. One of the electricians gave the secret away after the supper and explained that the substances were frozen by means of liquid air, of which one of the party had a supply. —Lynn (Mass.) Exchange

A Japanese Custom

At the birth of a Japanese baby a tree is planted, which must remain untouched until the marriage day of the child. When the nuptial hour arrives, the tree is cut down, and a skilled cabinet maker transforms the wood into furniture, which is considered by the young couple as the most beautiful of all ornaments of the house. —Meehan's Monthly

Take lunch at Thyes there is always a nice soup or salad and many other appetizing dishes. His liquid refreshments are also first-class.

The Elite is one of the most popular resorts in town. Henry Riter and Jim Kerr are always affable and courteous and all patrons are well treated.
